The quiet revolution: the rise of the authorized officer

New Zealand February Police News.

The trend in New Zealand, and the world, points towards an expanded role for second-tier policing. This article examines the rationale behind this trend, and describes the form it has taken in New Zealand with the 'authorized officer'. It reminds us of the risks of an overly specialized skill set, and the value of a traditional constable.

Police Pay, Conditions and Establishment Under Attack

Roger Randall, British Transport Police.

During the past 6 months we have seen a consistent attack by the current Government into our pay, conditions and police numbers... it will not be the Police Service alone that suffers but each community that sees a reduction in the service they expect and deserve from us.

Northern Ireland Police Pay and Conditions Under Attack

Terry Spence, Chairman of Police Federation for Northern Ireland.

In common with the rest of our 160,000 colleagues in the United Kingdom police service the Police Federation for Northern Ireland is likely to be on the receiving end of the recommendations of a two part report by Tom Winsor who has been tasked by the UK Coalition Government to review the terms and conditions of service and remuneration.

A change will do you good: think again about cutting police numbers

Simon Reed, Vice-Chair of the Police Federation of England and Wales.

The Police Federation of England and Wales asks the government to pause and take another look at the police budget. Recent events simply serve to focus the spotlight on just how important policing is to this country. The public agree and have pledged their support; surely the government should be reflecting their priorities?
